SUMMARY

USING ROUNDTABLE TECHNIQUE TO IMPROVE EIGHTH GRADE STUDENTS RECOUNT TEXT WRITING ACHIEVEMENT AT SMPN 2 MUMBULSARI JEMBER; Yanuar Rahmananda; 110210401050; 27pages; English Education Program, Language and Arts Department, Faculty of Teacher Training and Education, Jember University.

This research was intended to enhance the eighth grade students’ writing achievement by using roundtable technique at SMPN 2 Mumbulsari Jember. Based on the preliminary study done by the researcher by interviewing the English teacher, most of the eighth grade students in this school had difficulties in learning English especially in writing skills. There were so many difficulties from the students to write such as lack of ideas, not using correct grammatical structure and the content or the story of their writings still did not match with what should be written. For these reasons, the researcher wanted to overcome the students’ problems in learning writing, especially recount text writing by using roundtable technique.

The objectives of this research were: (1) to enhance the eighth grade students’ recount text writing achievement at SMPN 2 Mumbulsari Jember and (2) to describe how the teaching and learning process by using roundtable technique can assist the eighth grade students to write a recount text at SMPN 2 Mumbulsari Jember. The design of this research was Classroom Action Research which covered four stages of activities namely: (1) preliminary study or fact finding, (2) planning of the action, (3) implementation, and (4) evaluation. SMPN 2 Mumbulsari Jember was chosen purposively as the research area because the students on this school still had difficulties in learning and mastering writing. Among the eighth grade students in this school, VIII C students were chosen as the subjects of the research since they had the almost problems in learning writing and had the lowest percentage of the students who pass the standard minimum score for the previous English score. There were 30 students as the respondents of this research.

The data collection method used in this research was recount text writing achievement test, observation, and students’ artifact. The recount text writing achievement test was conducted at the end of the cycle (after implementing the action) to get the students’ score. Meanwhile, the observation was conducted during the implementation of the action to get the detail description of the students’ recount text writing learning process through roundtable technique. And the last students’ artifact was the result of the student’s discussion while doing the tasks by using roundtable technique.

This classroom action research was conducted only in one cycle since the result of the first cycle had achieved the research target. This research was considered to be successful if at least 75% of the VIII C students achieved the standard minimum score of the school, 75. The result of the recount text writing achievement test showed that there was an improvement of the percentage of the students who got ≥ 75. It was increased from 33.33% in the preliminary study (the students’ previous score) to 76.65% in the first cycle of the research (the students’ score of writing achievement test). For this reason, the second or the next cycle of the research was not necessary to be conducted.

Moreover, the result of the observation by using field notes showed that the teaching and learning process by using roundtable technique could give some contributions to the students in learning recount text writing. It could be concluded that the students were helped to do the tasks by using roundtable technique taught by the teacher. It did not only help the students to brainstorm the ideas, roundtable technique also helped students to build contribution among group members, they helped each other in order to complete the tasks given. Based on the research results above, it could be concluded that the use of roundtable technique could enhance the eighth grade students’ recount text writing achievement at SMPN 2 Mumbulsari Jember.

INTRODUCTION

This introductory chapter deals with the issue of investigation, the importance of discussing the issue, the position of this research in relation to the related previous studies, the research focus, and the research contribution.

1.1 Background of the research

The present research examines the issue of roundtable technique to promote students’ writing ability. As a model of cooperative learning, roundtable technique has been widely used in ELT today because of the importance of cooperative learning in ELT. Colorado (2007) states that cooperative learning has been proven to be effective for all types of students, including academically gifted, mainstream students and English Language Learners (ELLs) because it promotes learning and fosters respect and friendships among diverse groups of students. Therefore, cooperative learning can engage the students in an interactive approach to process information, resulting in greater retention of subject matter, improving attitudes toward learning, and enhancing interpersonal relations among group members.

One of cooperative learning techniques is Roundtable. It is a cooperative learning structure useful for brainstorming, reviewing, predicting, or practicing a skill, uses a single sheet of paper and pen for each cooperative learning group (Millis, 2007). It can be used to generate a large number of responses or ideas by responding in turn to a question and write on the paper.

As a technique in helping learners to gain writing ability, empirically Roundtable has been investigated by previous researchers in Indonesian context. Some of them are investigating the issue of roundtable technique on the students’ writing ability, for instances the research conducted by Fajrin (2008) in Pekanbaru, Hapsari (2011) in Batang, and Handayani (2012) in Yogyakarta. The results of those researches are almost the same, that roundtable technique is an effective way to improve the students’ writing achievement.
Specifically, the result of each research can be explained as follows. Fajrin (2008) reported that the use of roundtable technique could attract students’ attention. This statement was strengthened by Handayani (2012) who stated that the students were motivated and seemed to be interested in learning writing by using roundtable technique. She even compared the classroom situation of teaching writing by using roundtable technique to teaching writing by using direct instruction as the proof that roundtable classroom atmosphere was more alive than the other one. Besides, Hapsari (2011) also reported that the use of roundtable technique could make teaching learning process more active because every student had to participate in writing argument or answer in their group.

Based on the results of the previous studies, it can be concluded that the use of roundtable technique not only can improve the students’ writing achievement, but also students’ active participation. However, the research issue on investigating the explanation of how roundtable technique can help the students in learning writing is under explored. Therefore, the researcher is interested in conducting a research on how using roundtable technique help the students’ writing ability and improve their writing achievement. This study also considered to the result of the interview with the English teacher of SMP 2 Mumbulsari Jember which stated that the students had difficulties in English writing especially in organizing ideas and following some rules of writing.

1.2 Research Questions

The main focus of this research can be formulated in the following research questions.

1. Can the use of roundtable technique improve the junior high school students’ recount text writing achievement at SMPN 2 Mumbulsari Jember?

2. How can roundtable technique help the junior high school students in the process of writing recount text?
1.3 Significance of the research

1. The Theoretical Contribution

This research results are hoped to be able to give contribute to the existing literature on the effectiveness of roundtable technique to enhance the English writing skill, especially in Indonesian context.

2. The Empirical Contribution

Hopefully, this research results can be useful reference for the future researchers to do another research dealing with the use of roundtable technique on writing achievement or on another skill.

3. The Practical Contribution

The result of this research is hoped to give benefits for teachers to improve their teaching methods and strategies in teaching writing by using roundtable technique.
CHAPTER 2
REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE

2.1 Constructivist Learning Theory

Constructivism is an approach to teaching and learning based on the premise that cognition (learning) is the result of "mental construction". In other words, students learn by fitting new information together with what they already know. Constructivists believe that learning is affected by the context in which an idea is taught as well as by students' beliefs and attitudes. An important restriction of education is that teachers cannot simply transmit knowledge to students, but students need to actively construct knowledge in their own minds. That is, they discover and transform information, check new information against old, and revise rules when they do not longer apply. Constructivism is a learning theory found in psychology which explains how people might acquire knowledge and learn. Constructivism is basically a theory which is based on observation and scientific study, about how people learn. It says that people construct their own understanding and knowledge of the world, through experiencing things and reflecting on those experiences (Bereiter, 1994).

Tam (2000) lists the following four basic characteristics of constructivist learning environments, which must be considered when implementing constructivist instructional strategies. They are:
1) Knowledge will be shared between teachers and students.
2) Teachers and students will share authority.
3) The teacher’s role is a facilitator or guide.
4) Learning groups will consist of small numbers of heterogeneous students.

Constructivism is related to Curriculum 2013 which not use teacher center method. Those are the reasons why roundtable is suitable to be used for teaching which is not using teacher centered because roundtable could help students to build their own knowledge by discussion in their own groups. Each member of the group is asked to write their own sentences in a turn.

2.2 Roundtable Technique

Roundtable technique is one of cooperative learning techniques that can be applied in teaching writing. According to Lawrence (in Miller and Spencer, 1991:30), roundtable is a technique that can be used for brainstorming, reviewing, or practicing a skill. It means that roundtable technique is an appropriate technique to use to teach writing skill because the process of writing is started with brainstorming or how to find ideas for the topic to be written. Then, after it is written as the first draft it will be reviewed by group members through discussing. Those activities of roundtable technique belong to writing skill practices. Moreover, Kagan (2009:6.33) states that in roundtable technique, the students take turn generating written responses, solving problems, or making a contribution to a project in their teams. It is in line with a statement that says “roundtable is also a cooperative learning technique which is useful for brainstorming, reviewing, practicing a skill, uses a single sheet of paper and pen for each cooperative learning group” (Millis, 2007). It means that by generating written responses student have been learning how to brainstorm ideas. According to Bookman et al. (200:1) roundtable technique consist of two form, sequential and simultaneous form. The differences between those two form is in the paper and the pens given to the student. In sequential form each student in group have paper and pen. Moreover in simultaneous form, 1 group only have 1 paper and 1 pen so the student have to write their sentence by taking turn. In this research, the researcher choose to use simultaneous form in order to make learning activities more effective and make sure all of the student participate and give contribution to their own group. Then, in reviewing stage students will find some problems to be solved and every student can make contribution for their own group in order to achieve the purpose. Those activities are parts of the way to practice a skill (writing skill).

2.3 How Roundtable Technique Affects Student’s Writing Performance

In teaching writing recount text, roundtable technique can be used to improve students’ writing achievement. Roundtable has some aspects that can affect the student’s process of learning writing. Those aspects can be divided as:

a. Advantages of Using Roundtable Technique

According to Barkley, et al (2005:75) Roundtable encourages students to adjust their writing (in area like content, convention, style, and vocabulary) as they respond and react comments of the writer that preceded them. It means that roundtable technique ensures students to participate among the group members and find multiple ideas to complete the task given.
In addition, by using roundtable technique students will easier to generate ideas easily because each member will write their ideas and share it to the other members of the group. In this case, students are able to build contribution among the group member.

b. Disadvantages of Using Roundtable Technique

Although roundtable technique has many advantages, there are still some weaknesses appear when we use this technique to teach writing in general. One of its weaknesses is that it can only be used for simple tasks writing, not for the complex tasks. It is only the surface technique in teaching writing actually, so it is not a good technique when it is used to write a long essay writing. This weakness doesn’t give any affect this research because the subject of this research are 8th grade students of Junior High School in which their English materials are still considered as simple material such as recount text writing. Then, sometimes when taking turn in writing a sentence or word, students will work under pressure in order to complete the task given, it makes the students nervous and lose their focus. This weakness usually affects low level students. To solve this weakness the researcher will make heterogeneous groups based on their last result of writing test by the teacher that consist of high, average and low level students considering to their latest writing scores.

2.3.1 Writing in ELT

According to Spratt, et al. (2005:26), writing is one of productive skills which deal with conveying messages with the use of graphic symbols such as letters, words, phrases, and clauses to form a series of related sentences. In addition, Fairbairn and Winch in Retnaningsih (2014:6) states that writing is a form of communication as like speaking. In other words, writing can be defined as an activity of communication between the writer and the reader in which the writer tries to transfer or convey his or her messages through written text covering letters, words, phrases, and so on.

In English learning, writing is a complex skill which is important to be mastered by the students. Nunan (2003:88) states that writing is the process of thinking to invent ideas, thinking about how to express into good writing, and arranging the ideas into statement and paragraph clearly. It is also supported by Meyers (2005:2) that stated “writing is an action, a process of discovering and organizing our ideas, putting them on the paper and reshaping also revising them”. From the statements above, it can be known that writing is identical with the way to generate and organize the ideas in a written form. Writing needs thinking that focuses students on how to generate ideas. Therefore, in writing students are expected to explore and develop their ideas and make them into a good paragraph or even a text.

2.3.2 Aspects of Good Writing

In writing, students must concern of at least five aspects of good writing. They are grammar, vocabulary, mechanics, content and organization. Those aspects are necessary to make a readable and understandable writing. Each of the aspects will be discussed in the following parts.

a. Grammar

Good writing must show correct basic grammar pattern. According to Fairbairn and Winch (1996:108), grammar is a set of rules to construct sentences to make sense and acceptable in English. Correct grammatical sentences make the people who read them able to interpret the writer’s ideas. Therefore, correct grammar in writing is important to be concerned in order to make the writing itself meaningful.

b. Vocabulary

Vocabulary is a set of words of particular language (Hatch and Brown, 1995:11). It is used by people to convey the meanings. Vocabulary is one of the essential components to be mastered in writing English. Bram (1995:45) states that words or lexicon are the basic tool for writing since they are the basic components to construct sentences. By having broad collection of words, learners can express their ideas and feelings more clearly and effectively.

c. Mechanics

To make a good writing, there is something else needs to be paid attention after exploring ideas and make them into sentences called mechanics. Lindner (2005:183) says that mechanics are used to determine and clarify meaning. Meanwhile, the ability to use correctly the specific conventions to a particular written language is called as mechanical skill (Heaton, 1991:135). The writer should apply appropriate mechanics in order to make his writing better and make the readers easy to catch his ideas. It is in line with the statement proposed by Langan (1997:86) that a paper that contains a number of errors in mechanics will not make a favorable impression on the readers. Mechanics of writing used in this research consist of punctuation, spelling and capitalization.
d. Content

A good writing should contain many ideas which are in line with the topic being discussed by the writer. Those ideas in the form of sentences in certain paragraphs are called as the content of a text. Heaton (1991:135) states that content deals with the writer’s ability to think creatively and develop thoughts excluding the irrelevant information. In other words, the writer should deliver his ideas or messages by giving information which is relevant to the topic. To be able to give only relevant information related to the topic, the writer should have the knowledge and understand well about the topic itself.

e. Organization

According to Retnaningsih (2014:10), organizational skill means the ability to arrange sentences by following the generic structure of a text into logical arrangement and cohesion to make a unified text. Organization in writing has an important intention to make the readers reading the text easily.

Wingersky et al. (1999:36) state that a paragraph is regarded as a well-organized paragraph if it has unity and coherence. A paragraph can be said to have unity if all the supporting details or sentences are related and subordinated to the main idea of the topic sentence (Brandon and Brandon, 2011:287). In other words, the supporting sentences should explain the main idea which is expressed through the topic sentence. If there are any irrelevant sentences to the topic sentence, the paragraph can be said as lack of unity. Besides unity, another aspect in organization is coherence. According to Brandon and Brandon (2011:287), coherence means the flow of ideas, with each idea leading logically and smoothly to the next. In other words, a paragraph is said to be coherent if the sentences or the ideas are clearly connected to each other.

2.4 Conceptualizing Students’ Writing Achievement and Roundtable Technique

In this subchapter, specific definition of two variables related in this study will be presented so that misunderstanding and misinterpretation between the researcher and the reader can be avoided. The variables are students’ writing achievement as the dependent variable and roundtable technique as the independent variable.
2.4.1 Students’ Writing Achievement

In this research, the students’ writing achievement means how successful the students write a recount text which is evaluated by considering to five aspects of writing covering grammar, vocabulary, mechanics, content and organization. The achievement can be known from the students’ writing result in the form of scores.

2.4.2 Roundtable Technique

In this research, roundtable was conducted to improve student recount text writing achievement. The researcher will analyze how can roundtable help student to improve their recount text writing achievement. Student will write their ideas in turn.

2.5 Previous Studies on the Use of Roundtable Technique in Writing

There are some previous studies conducted by other researchers which are used as references for this research. Two of them were classroom action researches conducted by Hapsari (2011) and Siregar (2012) about the use of roundtable technique in teaching hortatory exposition text writing. In Hapsari’s research, she found out that the use of roundtable technique improved the students’ writing hortatory exposition text achievement and also increased the students’ motivation in learning English. Next, Siregar in her research found out that the use of roundtable technique could improve the students’ writing achievement. According to Siregar (2012:8) the result of statistical analysis showed that the mean score in the pre test was 43.9, increased to 60.85 in post-test 1 and 76.37 in post-test 2.

The other research was done by Handayani (2012) about the influence of roundtable technique on the students’ writing skill. In this research she tried to compare roundtable technique and direct instruction to know which one is more effective to teach writing achievement. The result showed that roundtable technique was more effective to teach writing rather than direct instruction. According to Handayani (2012:53), the mean score of the students taught by using roundtable was 75.44 and the mean score of the students taught by using direct instruction was 66.50.

The differences between this research and those previous studies are the text used and the main focus of the research. If the first and the second researches above used hortatory exposition text as the material to be given to the students, this research will use recount text to be applied since this kind of text is considered as a simple text and appropriate for junior high school students. Moreover, the focus of this research emphasizes to the use of roundtable technique to help the students in brainstorming ideas.
CHAPTER 3
THE STUDY

3.1 Research Design

Because the aim of this research was to solve the students’ problems in writing and enhance their writing achievement, Classroom Action Research (CAR) was appropriate to be applied. Classroom action research was a type of applied research that was intended to solve a specific classroom problem (McMillan, 1992:44). It is a study of social situation, with a view to improve or increase the quality of certain phenomena (Elliot, 1991:69).

According to Lewin (in Elliot, 1991:70), there were four basic stages in doing classroom action research in each cycle, namely (1) preliminary study, (2) planning the action, (3) implementation and (4) evaluation. Below was the illustration of the research procedure.

(Adapted from Lewin’s model in Elliot, 1991:71)

From the diagram of the research procedure above, the steps of this classroom action research were as follows:

1. Did a preliminary study by interviewing the English teacher of the eighth grade students at SMP Negeri 2 Mumbulsari Jember to identify the students’ problems in learning writing. (Appendix 2)
2. Found out some documents to gain the data about the names of the subjects and the students’ score of previous writing test from the English teacher. (Appendix 3)

3. Planned the action collaboratively with the English teacher by constructing the lesson plans and prepared the research instruments for each cycle such as writing test and observation guide, and preparing the materials of recount text. (Appendix 4 and 5)

4. Implemented the action of the first cycle by teaching writing recount text by using the roundtable technique. It was done by the researcher in meeting 1 and by the English teacher in meeting 2.

5. Observed the classroom activities done by the English teacher in meeting 1 and by the researcher in meeting 2 by using descriptive notes.

6. Administered the writing test to the students after the action given in the third meeting of the cycle.

7. Gave score to the results of the students’ writing test.

8. Analyzed the results of observation and the students’ writing test quantitatively in the percentage.

9. Reflected the results of writing test and observation in the first cycle descriptively.

10. Decided whether or not the research should continue to the next cycle. In this step, the research results had reached the criteria so the action was stopped.

11. Drew a conclusion to answer the research problems based on the results of observation and the students’ writing test in the first cycle.

3.2 Research Context

This research was conducted at SMPN 2 Mumbulsari Jember. The school implemented Curriculum 2013 and used electronic school books to run the teaching and learning process. In this school, English subject was taught in two meetings per week (4 lesson hours) and there were no extracurricular activities of English. Based on the result of the interview done by the researcher with the English teacher, she just asked the students to write a certain text based on the instruction in the book in teaching writing. She rarely gave more explanation about how to write it or gave some examples of writing the text meant. She also had not taught writing by using any method or technique specifically. Therefore, the researcher was interested in conducting a research which had purpose to enhance the students’ writing ability by using one of the techniques that was believed can improve writing achievement called roundtable technique.
3.3 Research Participants

The research participants were determined by using purposive method after conducting preliminary study in SMPN 2 Mumbulsari Jember. According to the English teacher’s information, the students who had the most difficulties in writing English are Class VIII C students. It was proved when the researcher did a class observation in Class VIII C that many students there still get confused in doing the writing task, many of their writings were grammatically incorrect, and the content or the story of their writings still did not match with what should be written. Besides, most of the students’ scores of writing test still could not pass the standard minimum score of English. It was indicated from the latest writing score that there were only 10 students from 30 students in total that achieved the standard minimum score of 75. Meanwhile, the other students could not achieve the standard minimum score.

3.4 Implementation Procedure of Roundtable Technique

The procedure of teaching recount writing by using roundtable technique was explained as follows.

Step 1: Making Group
1. The teacher made groups consist of 4-5 students with different level of abilities. The selection was based on the teacher’s consideration.
2. The teacher distributed one paper and one pen for each of the groups.

Step 2: Posing the Topic and Guiding Questions
1. The teacher posed the topic and gave guiding questions. The guiding questions were needed to keep the students write continuously. The examples of the guiding questions were “Who was in the story?”, “What kind of activities did they do there?”

Step 3: Writing Ideas in Group (Brainstorming)
1. After knowing about the topic that will be used for writing, the students brainstormed their ideas in group and wrote those ideas in a paper given by the teacher.
2. Each student took turn in writing, so the paper must be passed from one student to another. He/she should continue the idea from their friends’ ideas who wrote before him/her.
3. When the time was over, every student had to stop working. The time given for doing the task was 20 minutes.

Step 4: Discussing and Writing the Final Copy
1. The students discussed and shared what had been collected in the previous activity.
2. The teacher asked the students to develop and edit the sentences that they had produced with group to make the whole recount text.

3. The students wrote their final copy individually in group.

4. The teacher asked the students to submit their final writing.

Step 5: Giving Feedback

1. The teacher collected all of students’ results.

2. The teacher chose one of the results as an example and discussed it with all the students in classroom.

3. The teacher gave feedback on the students’ work to make sure they had understood the lesson they had learned.

4. The teacher drew a conclusion of the lesson.

3.5 Data Collection Method

There were two kinds of data gathered in this research: the quantitative and qualitative data. The quantitative data in the form of students’ scores of writing were collected from the results of students’ writing test. The qualitative data were in the form of field notes and students’ work artifacts. These data were gathered through observation and samples of writing tasks already done by students (students work artifacts).

a) Writing Test

Writing test has been developed to meet the content validity. Hughes (2003:26) claims that a test is said to be valid if it measures accurately what is intended to measure. To fulfill its content validity, the writing test has been developed to measure the writing ability stated in the curriculum 2013, i.e. students’ ability to write a recount text. The students were required to write a recount text in the topic of last holiday, and the length of the text ranged from 200 to 250 words. The time allocation for the test was 60 minutes.

Besides the validity of the test, reliability of the test was also needed. To establish the reliability, the researcher applied inter-rater reliability. As stated by Weigle (2002:135), inter-rater reliability is the use two or more different raters to give the same scores to the same script. Therefore, this present research used two raters. The first rater was the researcher and the second rater is the English teacher. The students’ writing test sheets were copied to the researcher and the English teacher. Then, the two raters gave score to the students’ writing independently by using the scoring rubric. The use of inter-rater reliability could make the scores of the test more reliable.
The way of scoring applied by the researcher was analytical scoring method which referred to a method of scoring which requires a separate score for a number of aspects of the task (Hughes, 2003:100). In this research, the aspects that were scored separately were grammar, vocabulary, mechanic, content, and organization (see Appendix 6).

b) Observation

In this research, observation was used to collect the data/evidence to help explain how teaching writing by using roundtable technique can enhance the students’ writing ability. The observation was done by using fieldnotes. Fieldnotes were created by the researcher to remember and record the behaviors, activities, events, and other features of the setting being observed. Observers would make important notes on students’ behaviors when they did the writing tasks. These notes would be analyzed based on advantages of roundtable according to some experts to explain how roundtable technique help the students to learn writing especially in brainstorming ideas and enhance their writing ability. Fieldnotes in this research were used to describe the students’ activities and behaviors whether or not they matched those statements. The notes were limited to the student activities in their group’s while doing writing task by using roundtable technique. (see Appendix 10). This way helped the researcher in taking the notes in order to know whether or not the use of roundtable technique could help the students to learn how to write recount text. The form of field notes was illustrated as follows:

c) Students’ Work Artifacts

Samples of students work artifacts were collected to provide more evidences to explain the extent to which roundtable technique can help the eighthgradestudents brainstorm ideas. For this purpose, students’ works were analyzed to answer the research question 2.

3.5 Data Analysis Method

The observational data containing notes about students’ behaviors in the process of teaching writing by using roundtable technique and samples of students’ work artifacts were analyzed qualitatively. They were analyzed thematically through the process of coding, categorizing, and interpreting the data in order to answer the first research question. The results of analysis were reported descriptively.

The scores of writing were analyzed using descriptive statistics by calculating the number of students who achieve minimally score ≥ 75. The following formula was used to calculate the percentage of students who achieve the standard score.

\[ E = \frac{n}{N} \times 100\% \]

Notes:
- E: the percentage of the total number of the students whose score is ≥75
- n: the total number of the students whose score ≥75
- N: the total number of the students

(Adapted from Ali, 1998:18)

The criteria used to evaluate the success of the action by using the formula above was: at least 75% of the students who took the test after joining the teaching and learning process by using roundtable technique reach the school standard score of 75.
CHAPTER 5
CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

This chapter deals with the conclusion of this classroom action research and some suggestions proposed by the researcher to the English teacher, the students, and the future researchers.

5.1 Conclusion

According the results of the data analysis and discussion, the conclusion of the research could be drawn as follows:

1. The use of roundtable technique could enhance the eighth grade students’ recount text writing achievement at SMPN 2 Mumbulsari Jember.
2. The activities in teaching and learning recount text writing by using roundtable technique could assist the eighth grade students’ recount text writing by giving some beneficial contributions at SMPN 2 Mumbulsari.

The improvement of the students’ recount text writing achievement could be seen from the percentage of the students who achieved the standard score. It was 43.32% higher than the percentage of the students who achieved the school standard score in their previous score, that was 33.33%. In other words, the percentage of the students who achieved the standard score after the actions given was 76.65% and it had fulfilled the research criteria of success.

Furthermore, the process of teaching and learning recount text writing by using roundtable technique in this research showed that the activities could assist their writing skill by giving some beneficial contributions to the students. Those contributions were in line with the experts’ statements about the strengths of the roundtable technique in order to enhance the students’ recount text writing achievement. They could be proven from the result of the observations which were relevant to the theories proposed by some experts dealing with the use of roundtable technique.
5.2 Suggestions

Considering to the research findings, it was known that the use of roundtable technique could enhance the students’ recount text writing achievement. Thus, the following suggestions are proposed to the following people.

1. The English Teachers

   Based on the research results, the English teachers are suggested to use roundtable technique as an alternative technique in teaching writing to improve the students’ writing achievement. Roundtable technique is easily done and considered as an effective technique which could help the students in brainstorming the ideas and practicing writing skill.

2. The Students

   The students are suggested to learn and practice their writing skill by using roundtable technique since this technique can be used for useful learning that can assist them to improve their writing.

3. The Future Researchers

   The future researchers who have the similar problems are suggested to use the results of this research as references to conduct a further research dealing with the use of roundtable technique using the same or different research design like experimental or descriptive research, with different language skills for different level of subjects and schools.

LEARNING MATERIALS

Set Induction
Leading Questions:
1. Did you go somewhere in the last holiday?
2. Where did you go?
3. Most of the students here have ever been gone to the beach, have you?
4. When and what did you do there?

Learning Objective:
After joining the lesson, the students are expected to be able to write a recount text with the theme “Holiday at a Recreation Place” such as Beach.

Main Activities
Recount Text
Recount text is a text which retells events or experiences in the past. Its purpose is either to inform or to entertain the audience.

Generic Structure of Recount Text
a. Orientation: Introducing the participant, place and time.
b. Events: Describes series of events that happen in past.
c. Reorientation: Personal comment of the writer about the story.

Language Feature of Recount Text
a. Using Simple Past Tense.
b. Using chronological connection: then, after that, etc.
c. Using action verbs: go, look, walk, etc.

Example of Recount Text

My Vacation at the Beach

One day, my sister named Putri said to me that she really wanted to go to the beach. So I promised her that the following week we would go to Mutun beach in Lampung.

The following week, we prepared everything needed in the morning. We brought some foods and beverages, such as chocolate wafers, potato chips, water and orange juice. Before going to the beach, I asked our brother, Bayu, to join us. He agreed to join and we went there together with our parents. We went there by car. It took 3 hours to arrive there. Then, we bought tickets in the entrance gate. Before swimming, we changed our clothes first. We swam there for more than one hour. We felt so tired that we decided to eat the foods that we had brought. Next, three of us created a very big sand castle, while my parent enjoyed the beautiful scenery there. After that, we decided to go home because it was getting dark. On the way home, we still felt hungry. So we stopped at a restaurant to have dinner. I ordered suki, Lampungnese traditional food, while my brother, my sister, and my parents ordered fried rice.

After finished eating, we paid our bills. Then, we went home. We arrived at home at 9 o’clock. We were tired but we were absolutely happy.

My Holiday in Dieng

Last holiday, my family and I went to Dieng. We departed from home at 4 p.m. We expressly departed in the afternoon because we wanted to stay overnight there. To decrease my boredom on the way there, I chatted with my family.

At about 9 p.m, finally we arrived there. When we entered Dieng region, we felt very cold, because the temperature in Dieng region was very low. After that, all of us looked for home stay. Finally, we found a place to take a rest in one of home stays in Dieng comfortably.

In the morning, my family and I visited one of tourism objects. It was called “Kawah Sikidang” or we usually called “Sikidang Crater” in English. The crater was the easiest crater to reach and it had some facilities, such as prayer place and bathroom. In Sikidang Crater, the sulphur odor was very incisive so that we had to use mask. We spent our time by taking pictures and drinking tea. After we had done with our activity, we continued our trip. Before we went home, we dropped in the Dieng gifts store. There, we could buy some gifts and brought them back from our trip. We bought carica. When we were on the way to our home, I tried to eat carica. I thought that carica was not delicious, but actually the taste was very sweet and made me addicted.

At 3 p.m, we arrived home. I was so tired, but I felt happy because I got many lovely experiences when we had holiday. I hope I can visit Dieng again next time.
