ABSTRACT

Code-switching is a language phenomenon where people use more than one language or more than one variety of one language in a single conversation. This phenomenon is a consequence of bilingualism or multilingualism. But, it is still possible for a monolingual community to conduct code-switching, because in certain extent they are bidialectal or multidialectal. Apart from bidialectal or multidialectal society, in diglossic situation, code-switching can also be conducted. This research is intended to elaborate the language phenomenon that happens to the English Department students. The problems to solve are what languages the students possess and use, what are the code-switching phenomena classified into, and what are the significance of the use of code-switching for the students. The data are in the form of qualitative data that have been gathered by conducting observation, questionnaire, and interview. The result of the discussion shows that all of the students are multilingual people that often switch their codes. Certain triggers and purposes cause the students to do so. The study also shows that code-switching is quite important for the students which have different background of ethnic or culture.

Key words: multilingualism, dialect, diglossia

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Praise be to God, the Almighty and the most beneficent Who always blesses me, so I can finish the thesis. Eventually, I believe that without His mercies, it is almost impossible for me to compose this scientific report that is used to accomplish one of the final requirements to obtain Sarjana Sastra Degree at the Faculty of Letters, Jember University.

In accomplishing this final report, there are so many helps I owe from some people. Therefore, I would like to express my deep gratitude to Drs. Syamsul Anam, M.A. as my first advisor and Agung Tri W. SS. M.Pd as my second advisor for supervising and correcting the draft of this thesis.

Furthermore, my sincere gratitude is due to Prof. Dr. Samudji, M. A. the Dean of the Faculty of Letters, Drs. Syamsul Anam, M.A. the head of the English Department and Dra. Dina Dyah, M. A. for the approval to start composing this thesis. It is without the patience of all the lecturers in transferring me such an enormous knowledge during my study, this writing work is probably impossible to finish. Thus, my gratitude is also due to them.

Moreover, to the librarians of the Faculty of Letters and of the central, my gratitude is also addressed to. In spite of those wonderful people, I also thank a lot to all the staffs of Faculty of Letters for the help in academic necessity, SWAPENKA for the wonderful brotherhood, FORTISSIMO for the big family, and all friends of mine who always be there however I am.

Finally, I hope this thesis can valuably contribute to the development of language study especially Sociolinguistics and at least can give deeper understanding to the readers that are interested in this language study.
